Kara was born and raised in Tucson, Arizona. After receiving an undergraduate degree from Creighton University, Kara pursued a master's degree in international development at the University of Arizona. Then, after working in that field for several years, Kara moved to Boston to attend Northeastern University School of Law.

As a law student, Kara participated in Northeastern's Poverty Law and Immigration Law Clinics where she represented individuals in unemployment hearings and assisted individuals apply for asylum. Kara spent a semester as an extern at the Arizona Court of Appeals, Division I in the chambers of Hon. Lawrence Winthrop.

Outside of practice, Kara enjoys hiking, camping, and traveling.
